Droopy, hooded eye lids and sagging eyebrows instantly communicates a lack of vitality even in the youngest faces and will add years to your appearance. Hooding of the upper lids is a fairly common problem with aging.

While blepharoplasty (surgery) remains the gold standard for treating this problem, many people wish to avoid the expense, risks and downtime of traditional eyelift surgery.

Many patients are concerned about their under eye area, even from a very early age, and this concern intensifies over time. The aesthetic lower eyelid should blend seamlessly with the cheek. When the lower eyelid and cheek don't blend together, the lower eyelid becomes more aged and prominent.
